

I disagree with any change to current law that allows increased ownership of local media television and radio stations by national or international corporations. I fear that national corporations will have very little interest in local voices and opinions, and that this would be reflected in programming that would be designed for a national audience rather than for a local audience. I am for local ownership of broadcasting, whether TV or radio, in order to help ensure diversity of opinion.